

The Lucerne School of Art and Design offers degree courses which are unique in Switzerland, and, in the realm of art and design research, provides creative focal points in art, design and film. Thanks to national and international networking, high-calibre staff, well-equipped workshops and spacious studios, the School offers an environment with a wealth of opportunities for development. It is one of six Schools making up the Lucerne University of Applied Sciences and Arts with its 1500 staff and 10,300-plus degree and continuing education students.

The Master Animation offers an education at an international level in the midst of a lively Swiss and European film industry. It is aimed at animation filmmakers who want to further develop their artistic profile with high standards and strive to connect to the international market. The Master's program in Animation at the Lucerne School of Art & Design provides an introduction to the broader context of the international animation film industry and its funding instruments. Starting August 1, 2022, or by agreement, we are seeking a
